Hamstring Strain

A hamstring tear is an injury to the muscles in the back of your thigh. The three muscles that make up this group are called the biceps femoris, semitendinosus, and semimembranosus.

If the muscles or tendons that attach the muscle to bone are injured, it is called a hamstring tear. Tears can be mild or severe, with severe tears causing the muscle to completely tear, possibly requiring surgery. Hamstring muscles are often injured during sports that involve sprinting, or quick changes of direction in movement. Muscle tightness, muscle weakness, or muscle fatigue can also increase your risk of a hamstring tear.

The most common symptom of a hamstring tear is sudden pain in the back of the thigh. Bruising and swelling may occur right after you injure the muscle. It may be difficult for you to walk, run, stand up from a chair, or climb stairs. The muscle may also feel fatigued or tired and weak.

Therapy can help you to decrease the pain and swelling caused by a hamstring tear. You will learn how to increase your activity gradually while you heal. Your therapist will also teach you how to stretch, strengthen, and move your body in the right ways to avoid reinjury.
